If you have just purchased your lamb, you are probably moving it to its new home. Whenever a change in a feeding program is made, it should be made gradually. It is a good idea to assume that your lamb has previously been on a unique feeding program consisting of hay and other types of feed.

So that your lamb will easily adapt to King Lamb Show Complete, make the change in the feeding program in a gradual manner, especially when changing from a diet high in roughage (hay) to a diet high in grain content. For lambs that have been on a high roughage diet, gradually increase King Lamb Show Complete by about ½ pound every other day while slowly decreasing the daily amount of roughage. Until you aren't feeding any hay at all.

Feed your lamb King Lamb Show Complete 2 times per day, morning and night. You should feed your lamb between 2 ½ - 4 ½ pounds of grain per day. Feed the same amount of King Lamb Show Complete in the morning as you do in the evening. Remember that you shouldn't feed any hay to your lamb when you are feeding King Lamb Show Complete.

Although we recommend feeding King Lamb Show Complete, we also manufacture King Lamb Supreme. For those of you that prefer feeding hay, this classic formula has been designed to work in partnership with hay. You should feed a combined weight of Lamb Supreme and Hay of approximately 3-4 ½ pounds per day.

Weigh and mark your feed scoop or container to make sure that you feed the right amount of King Lamb Show Complete. Always use the same scoop or container, don't borrow from someone else and assume they are feeding the same amount of feed.

You should always give your lamb fresh feed. If your lamb is leaving old feed behind, you are probably feeding too much.

Don't mix or add any other feed with King Lamb Show Complete, it has been formulated to give your lamb all of the vitamins and nutrients it needs. King Lamb Show Complete also contains Deccox, an ingredient used to prevent coccidiosis in young lambs.

By feeding King Lamb Show Complete, your lamb should gain $\frac{1}{2}$ - 1 pound per day. Your lamb will achieve the maximum rate of gain when it is on full feed. Don't forget to weigh your lamb on a weekly basis to make sure it isn't getting too fat or staying too thin.

Be mindful of weight minimums and maximums for the Fair you plan on entering.

Make sure your lamb has fresh clean water at all times.
